The Global Research Practicum is a 3-credit MBA course in which students experience firsthand the business practices and culture of other world economic powers.

The 2016 Global Research Practicum in Munich and Prague will let students:

- Learn about the economy, geopolitics, and future trends of two important European countries
- Gain hands-on global business experience through visits to companies and cultural landmarks
- Network with business leaders and MBA students
- Complete a globally focused research project by conducting field research on location

Professor of Business Administration Lawrence Feick is leading the trip. He has held visiting professor positions in Germany, Hungary, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, and Ecuador and was a Fulbright Scholar in Uruguay. He is completely fluent in German.

Deadline to apply is November 5, 2015
Register early. Group flights are limited.
Contact: Patricia Sabolsky, Director of Special International Programs
412-383-8835 or PSabolsky@katz.pitt.edu
The Global Research Practicum is a 3-credit MBA course in which students experience firsthand the business practices and culture of other world economic powers.

The 2016 Global Research Practicum in Seoul and Taipei will let students:

- Learn about the economies, geopolitics, and future trends of two important countries
- Gain hands-on global business experience through visits to companies and cultural landmarks
- Network with business leaders and Katz alumni
- Complete a globally focused research project by conducting field research on location

Professor of Business Administration Jennifer Shang is leading the trip. She is a native of Taiwan and completed her undergraduate education at the National Taiwan University. She is widely published in the global supply chain management and manufacturing areas.

Deadline to apply is November 5, 2015
Register early. Group flights are limited.
Contact: Patricia Sabolsky, Director of Special International Programs
412-383-8835 or PSabolsky@katz.pitt.edu
The Global Research Practicum is a 3-credit MBA course in which students experience firsthand the business practices and culture of another world economic power. Students interested in learning Spanish before the trip can take a language course. Please register for the language classes with Jacqueline Saslawski of the International Business Center.

The 2016 Global Research Practicum in Buenos Aires lets participants:

- Learn about Argentina’s economy, geopolitics, and future trends
- Gain hands-on global business experience through visits to Argentinian companies and cultural landmarks
- Network with Argentinian business leaders and government officials
- Complete a globally focused research project by conducting field research in Argentina

Jo Olson, professor of business administration and senior advisor of the International Business Center, is leading the trip. She has a wealth of research experience with Latin American economies and has led a number of MBA trips to South America and Europe.

Deadline to apply is November 5, 2015
Register early. Group flights are limited.
Contact: Patricia Sabolsky, Director of Special International Programs
412-383-8835 or PSabolsky@katz.pitt.edu